A close associate said Mr. Singh was deeply disturbed by the army's invasion of the temple.

The government of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi ordered the attack to put down the campaign of Sikh extremists trying to win autonomy and religious privileges in Punjab, where Sikhs make up a 52-percent majority of the population. Supporters of the Sikh Akali Dal party have demanded that Mr. Singh resign to save the honor of India's 13 million Sikhs because he had failed to stop the army from attacking the temple.

Udall to Mediate Between Mondale And Hart on Issues Splitting Party

WASHINGTON — Democratic Party leaders have called in Repre-sentative Morris K. Udall of Arizona, a respected party figure and a former presidential candidate, to act as a mediator between Gary Hart and Walter F. Mondale in the six weeks before the Democratic National Convention.

Summit Nations Reaffirm 'Shared Ideals,' Differ On Third World Debt

By Axel Krause

ional Herald Tribune LONDON - Leaders of seven industrialized countries issued a declaration here Friday rejecting the use of force as a means of settling disputes and reaffirming their belief in "the need for peace

"We are convinced that international problems and conflicts can and must be resolved through reasoned dialogue and negotiation, and we shall support all efforts to this end," the statement said.

The broad declaration contrasted with specific proposals for eco-nomic and trade initiatives made by various leaders. Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain outlined a proposal to gear lending to Third World countries to their economic performance and to their willingness to attract private capi-

In sharp contrast to Mrs. Thatcher's private-investment approach, President François Mitterrand of France warned that the debt crisis "would worsen if there was no drop in real interest rates in the United States," a spokesman for Mr. Mitterrand said.

The conference declaration on the use of force was vague partly because the summit leaders were divided over the handling of the political declarations.

President Ronald Reagan, according to U.S. aides, was seeking what was described as "a strong statement" on relations with the Soviet Union, while Chancellor Helmut Kohl of West Germany was seeking a more conciliatory ap-

Britain's foreign secretary, Sir Geoffrey Howe, said that the declaration enabled West Germany to join in "our commonly shared ideals."

A separate statement dealing with East-West relations, including a possible call on the Soviet Union to renew nuclear disarmament talks, was being drafted Friday evening for inclusion in the final communiqué to be issued Saturday.

In his speech, Mr. Mitterrand renewed his calls for greater involvement by governments in ap-proaching Third World debt and economic development. Mr. Mitterrand said that in in-dustrialized countries, both state and market forces had roles to play, but he strongly urged coordinated government action for what he termed "improvement of the monetary system." He renewed a call made at the 1981 Versailles summit conference for a new monetary reform conference. To prepare for such a conference, he suggested that the informal Group of 10 within the International Monetary Fund be expanded to about 20 participants. including Brazil, China, Saudi Arahia and Zaire, according to the French spokesman.

Sir Geoffrey told reporters that discussions on the Third World debt reflected a consensus around the U.S. approach of handling debt on a case-by-case basis rather than on the global basis suggested by Mr. Mitterrand. He declined to comment on the French proposals. Throughout the day, European officials, including finance minis-ters, criticized high U.S. interest rates and the administration's budget deficit. They called on the administration to take what the West German economics minister, Otto Lambsdorff, described as "further action" on reducing the deficit.

But U.S. officials, including Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, continued brushing off the criticism, stressing that U.S. interest rates would come down without specific action by Washington and that the U.S. recovery was "well under way."

Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone of Japan agreed on Thursday to urge the summit participants to call for new negotiations on trade in 1986. Although they were supported by Mrs. Thatcher and Chancellor Kohl, other summit leaders, notably Mr. Mitterrand and Prime Minister Bettino Craxi of Italy, ex-

Electoral Concerns Also Affect European Leaders at Summit

U.S. House Votes Bill To Tie Highway Funds To State Drinking Laws

By Steven V. Roberts New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - Responding to a growing public outcry against drinking-related deaths on the roads, the House of Representatives has approved legislation that would reduce federal highway funds to states that did not raise their legal drinking age to 21.

The amendment was offered by Representative James J. Howard, Democrat of New Jersey. It was added by voice vote to a bill allocating $5.2 billion for interstate highway construction. "This is not a problem of states" is a problem of human lives. It affects not only those doing the drinking but everyone else on the road." The House passed the entire highway bill Thursday night by a vote of 297 to 73.

Under the amendment, the 27 states that allow drinking below the age of 21 would have a two-year ace period to change their laws. grace period to change uses sawe.
States that did not comply would lose 15 percent of their federal highway funds over the following two years. The Senate would have to act on the measure before it became law. It is currently considering similar legislation.

Mr. Howard, chairman of the House Public Works Committee, said 25,000 people died each year in alcohol-related accidents and that 5,000 of them were teen-agers. Another 15,000 teen-agers were injured, he said.

He said the point of having a federal law, instead of leaving the issue to the states, is to stop teenthat permit drinking at younger

"Drunk drivers are really mur-derers waiting in the wings," added Representative Barbara Boxer, Democrat of California. Representative J. Roy Rowland,

Eisenhower Was Set to Use A-Bomb in Korea

By Bernard Gwerrzman New York Times Service

WASHINGTON -- Newly released documents give details on a decision by President Dwight D. Eisenhower's administration in 1953 to use atomic bombs in North Korea and China, if necessary, to end the Korean War.

Once an armistice was achieved, on July 27, 1953, the Eisenhower administration continued to define plans to use nuclear weapons if the Communists renewed the war, which North Korea began in 1950. Eisenhower took office in Jan-uary 1953 after talks on a cease-fire had dragged on for two years. The war had settled into a standoff, with casualties incurred, but no change in the front line, which still separates North and South The fact that the Eisenhower administration was ready to use nuclear weapons is not new. Eisenhower, in his memoirs, said he came into office prepared to use them to break the deadlock. What is new in the 2,000 pages of documents made public Thursday is the high level of planning and the discussions on possible use of these weapons, and Eisen-hower's interest in overcoming reluctance to use them.

Dwight D. Eisenhower

His predecessor, Harry S. Truman, ruled out their use when the subject came up at two news conferences during his administra-

But Eisenhower was ready to use the weapons rather than face another debilitating war in Ko-rea, according to a report of a National Security Council meeting on Dec. 3, 1953.

The president expressed with great emphasis the opinion that if the Chinese Communists attacked us again, we should certainly respond by hitting them hard and wherever it would hurt most, including Peiping itself," the record of the meeting says, using the former name of Beijing. This, said the president, would mean all-out war against Com-munist China," the document

The volume, in two books, covers Korea from 1952 to 1954, and in addition to discussing readiness to use nuclear weapons, discloses differences in approach between officials. The discussion on the use of nuclear weapons in Korea was followed by a policy of threatening to use such weapons in case of a large-scale attack by the Soviet Union.

At the December 1953 meeting, Eisenhower asked Admiral Arthur W. Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, whether he agreed that there would be a war with China if South Korea were attacked anew.

cided to give Dallas a museum that rity of an abstraction possessi would stand forever as proof against any accusation the town is nclined to energetic excess.

Barnes, 69, is a New York archidesign of Minneapolis's Walker Art Center. Here, he allowed just one bit of architectural drama on that breaks the severely horizontal line of the building.

The museum does have character, but it is that of a puritan in the desert, lean and precise. The sculpture garden, although still thinly populated with art, is an extremely nice space in itself. The interior is on three levels. More than 70,000 square feet of exhibition area are connected by a kind of "grand gallery" that runs the length of the building and provides orientation and access.

Public and critical response have been favorable. Social Dallasites (or Dallas socialites) like to rent the garden and airy restaurant for catered affairs. The museum director,

The only critical jabs seem to have been some grumbling directed to the size of Barnes's dramatic 40foot vault. On the interior, it has a solid, slightly ecclesiastical sense of lift like a Romanesque cathedral, but it does tend to make even oversize pieces of contemporary art look dinky.

That is a real problem, as Dallas has examples by Clyfford Still, Sam Francis, Morris Louis, Tom Weselmann and others that deserve to look their best.

Unflapped by the problem, the issioned a recently installed special piece by Claes Ol-denburg titled "Stake Hitch." It consists of an 18-foot metal stake attached to the vault by a "rope" too big to embrace. The stake appears to penetrate the floor. Oldenburg, never one to leave a joke unfinished, has put the rest of the stake where it belongs. It comes out in a basement loading dock virtually inaccessible to the general public. (You are nobody in Dallas till to happen.

A more-or-less inevitable thinness in European Old Masters and early modern art is partly compensated by a few keen or offbeat works, such as Gustave Courbet's "Fox in the Snow," two nice Monets, a friendly Mondrian, an oddly compelling Naum Gabo head and connoisseurs' minor masterpieces by Gerald Murphy.

He emigrated to Paris where he started an international press service, cordially reviled by the Fibrer and Joseph Goebbels, When Paris fell, Winston Churchill sent a submarine to rescue Reeves, fled to England and later became a British citizen. Reeves eventually bought a villa in southern France and filled it with picturesque objets d'art and a collection of a dozen paintings. Part of the villa will be recreated in the museum. A preview peek at the pictures showed small works of extremely high quality by masters from Degas and Manet to Gau-guin. Van Gogh and Cezamne.

Every time a new museum is announced, one despairs of the possibility of finding significant art to fill it. Almost every time a new museum is visited, there is confirmation that, given the necessary energy, fine things still find a way

Theater for Gastarbeiter

F RANKFURT —A festival of first Eskimo theater in the world."
The actors, Greenland Eskimos in Western Europe opened here Friday, designed partly to help counteract discrimination against "gnest workers" in West Germany. The festival, which lasts until June 17, brings together 10 amateur and professional groups from Eu-ropean Community countries.

There is a strong resistance in Germany to foreigners and this festival is just a start in trying to correct this," said Hilmer Hoffmann, president of a council atranging the festival

The festival is being held under the anspices of a cultural organization of foreign workers in Frank-fart. The city has the highest popu-lation of Gastarbetter in West Germany, where there are a total of 4.5 million foreign workers.

One visiting group is El Kapisi, a troupe of Turkish actors based in Amsterdam, performing a work by Bertolt Brecht — in Turkish.

working in Dennsark, call them-selves Tukak, Eskimo for barpoon. They say the barpoon with its line is a symbol of the link they are making between their present and their ancient past in Greenland.

Other groups include Silhouette: Theatre of Black Women, from London, and a Portuguese group based in Frankfort, which will perform an item about foreigners' difficulties with German bureaucracy.

Klaus Matthies, a local journalist who thought up the idea of the festival, sees the event as a reflection of an emerging European cul-ture that is neither wholly foreign nor completely German -- a guestworker or emigrant culture.

He said: "There is a kind of melting pot ideology in the United States and its cosmopolitan character is thanks mostly to the culture of itamigrants. I can see the same thing happening in Europe."

Valerio Adami: 'It's So Fantastic, the Adventure of Painting'

By John G. H. Oakes

HARTRES, France - When Valerio Adami was racing cars for kicks on the Ferrari circuit in the Italian Alps, he says, he was good but not good enough. "I was too emotional. I was always worried about the car behind."

Now, 20 years later, the Italian painter seems to have gotten over the fear that the competition is creeping up on him. "In my world. the world of a painter, there must be absolute concentration. You can't be and won't be disturbed by somebody behind you."

If Adami is serene about his position, it is with good reason. Next spring, in honor of his 50th birthay, the Centre Georges Pompidou n Paris will hold a retrospective of his work since 1964.

Currently, his major project is a series of eight stained-glass windows, each about 9 meters (29.5 eet) tall, for the city hall of Vitry-the enlarged design by the crafts-men at Jacques Loire's studio here. Adami becomes startlingly im-venture of painting. It's part of a end - who knows where?" profound necessity to express oneself, something everybody shares. Some people express themselves through violence, I do it through painting. My life is entirely devoted to that work.

As for many artists, creativity does not come easily. "I go into a sort of panic before a blank sheet of paper. Where will I begin? Then, little by little, there is this extraordinary movement that turns into a

There was never any doubt that he would be an artist, Adami says. He grew up in the "decadent atmosphere of the petty aristocracy" in Bologne and at 10 had decided on his profession. By the age of 17, he had his first contract with a professional gallery.

> Adami, who spent a number of years studying at Milan's Brera Academy, embraces the suggestion that his attitudes are a throwback to the pre-industrial era.

"I am personally much more interested in the past than I am in the future," he says, singling out Bronzino, Botticelli, and others of the Renaissance when asked to name artists who influence his work. "We is not the product of myself alone." But while Adami talks of paint-and a humorous statement against

The idea of using stained-glass windows in a modern building scens to mesh nicely with Adami's fondness for the past. "The architect [François Girard] thought the city hall should represent a role closer to that of a church in a medieval village," Adami says, adding it is the stained-glass windows that will provide "exact identification with a church.

Adami encountered both technipieces of glass, first of all, because the glass is blown and cut by hand. Curved lines are difficult for the artisans to cut, and the colors are inconsistent — and the light is changing constantly, which is also part of the beauty of stained glass. Finally, the lead that surrounds each piece of glass will appear a black outline that must be taken into account. And I want strong images. Each cut, each piece has to be strong."

Precise as Adami is, the transi tion from canvas to stained glass was not easy for him; the project demanded a new approach for the painter. "My work translates bad-y," he says. "I must think in another way. The language is different. The windows are like mosaics."

After receiving the commission in 1981, Adami agonized over the project. "It was as if you asked a composer to write a military march," he said. He coped well with the new medium, however, and the result is attractive in form and content: brilliant blues, yellows and reds; a clown standing on his head, a shepherd, a marriage, the prodigal son, a woman holding a looking glass, two allegorical fig-ures and Ubu.

Iranian F-4 fighters. "A strange event," said a Saudi broadcast, while the kingdom's envoy in Washington found it "a pity we had to be dragged into this conflict." What is really strange is the outlook underlying these remarks — Saudi Arabia's complacent illusion that it could stay out of trouble in the Gulf the easy way, with money.

When Iraq attacked Iran nearly four years ago, the Saudis went to Baghdad's financial assistance even though the aggressive Iraqi regime had been armed by the Soviet Union. Other Saudi clients have variously included Syrians, Palestinians and nearly every Leba-nese faction. This has secured Saudi Arabia's safety among Arab states, but not against the revolutionary zealotry of non-Arab Iran. Whatever its other sins, Iran has real grievances in the Gulf war. It was Iraq that first attacked neutral shipping in a desperate effort to break the battlefield deadlock. In reprisal, and despite its own dependence on oil exports, Iran fired on tankers bound for Saudi Arabia

Saudi Arabia seems embarrassed by its fli- and Kuwait. Then on Tuesday, Iran's aging ers' success in shooting down one or more U.S.-made warplanes apparently entered Saudi airspace, proving an easy mark for the faster, better-armed American-made F-15s. Saudi Arabia and its conservative Arab friends have the most to lose if sea lanes are closed or insurance rates soar ruinously. Over the years, Saudi Arabia has pleaded for and received sophisticated U.S. hardware. From AWACS to Stingers, the costly weapons have flowed with only token diplomatic response. Saudis have wanted U.S. protection, but have consistently ruled out an American presence, fearing that such open dependence would somehow jeopardize their tricky balancing act.

While pressing in every forum for the lifting of all blockades, the United States ought to help the Saudis defend their territory, their oilfields, their navigation rights. But the skirmish Tuesday makes the larger point. American aid and sympathy are no substitute for Saudi Arabia's determination to uphold its rights the old-fashioned way - by risking Saudi lives for a Saudi cause.

The Banks and Latin Debt

The commercial banks have made an important contribution to the orderly management of Latin debt with their agreement to reschedule Mexico's payments. The handling of the debts so far has been a series of very shortterm reactions to imminent crises. With the negotiations now promised, it will move to a longer perspective reaching out over a decade.

The banks are evidently prepared both to lower interest rates and to postpone repayment, in recognition of the extraordinarily forceful and painful measures that Mexico has already taken. That is a crucial principle that lenders reward good performance and good faith on the part of heavily burdened borrowers. The banks have begun with the strongest and most promising case. Mexico, after all, is one of the world's leading oil exporters. Brazil has gone through a substantial reduction in standard of living. It is entitied to the same consideration that the banks are extending to Mexico. The best description of what is going on is the speech that Jacques de Larosière, the director of the International Monetary Fund, delivered at the recent bankers' conference in Philadelphia. The idea of forcing banks to write off some of the Latin debt is, as he said, wishful thinking. Most of the Latin countries — Mexico next year will evidently be the exception continue to need more foreign loans. It governments, there or here, exact contributions from the banks that they consider punitive, they will cease to lend further. That would be a fast route to defaults and a collapse of trade. The banks are going to have to make substantial concessions, as they are beginning to do in the case of Mexico, but those concessions are going to have to be voluntary. The governments of the industrial countries also have responsibilities, Mr. de Larosière said: They must resist the protectionists and keep their markets more consistently open.

There is one more thing — interest rates are rising. They are up a point and a half since March, which will cost the developing countries more than $5 billion a year in additional interest charges. The large budget deficits in the rich industrial countries are one prominent reason for those high interest rates. "Action to deal with budget deficits must, therefore, be taken as a matter of urgency, especially in the United States," Mr. de Larosière said. Since higher U.S. budget deficits mean a lower Latin standard of living, they are bad not only as economic policy but as political morality as well.

Gandhi Gambles on Force

No one who cares about democracy can be indifferent to the bloody drama in India's Punjab. By sending soldiers into the holiest Sikh shrine, the Golden Temple in Amritsar, Indira Gandhi has put more than her own political life at risk. If things go badly, and communal violence widens, a nagging night-mare could turn into reality; the fragmenting of India's secular democracy.

The two-day assault on the fortified temple claimed nearly 400 lives, including that of the fiery Jarnail Singh Bhindranwale, leader of Sikh militants. Only a minuscule fraction of India's 14 million Sikhs joined in his terror campaign. But martyrdom sanctifies, and his death could intensify the rebellion the prime minister is striving to contain.

Still, Mrs. Gaadhi's choices at this late hour were limited. Hundreds have been killed during two years of rebellion in the Punjab, the fertile granary that constitutes India's Iowa. There was a nonviolent Sikh protest movement, but it was eclipsed when the prime minister rebuffed its demands, opening the way for Mr. Bhindranwale and his followers. There was no direct connection between the Punjab and the Hindu-Moslem riots in Bombay last month, but in India as elsewhere, disorder is contagious. If the prime minister has gambled on striking forcefully, the risks of temporizing were also great — especially with elections due in the fall. It is the danger of India unraveling that earns Mrs. Gandhi the benefit of the doubt.

Who are the Sikhs and why are they angry? Their religion is a monotheistic offshoot of Hinduism, originating about 1500, and most Sikhs live in Punjab. The British annexed their state in 1847, and for a century Sikhs were favored in the armed forces and bureaucracy. Indeed, the British gave legal status to their separate religious identity in 1925, an issue of contention ever since.

Since Indian independence in 1947, Sikhs have pleaded for greater autonomy and for constitution. When their state was divided in 1966, Sikhs became a majority in Punjah, but they lost water rights and control of their showpiece capital of Chandigarh, designed by Le Corbusier. But autonomy is the core demand, and the hardest to compromise on. Sikhs complain that New Delhi has unfairly creamed off the Punjab's prosperity to spread its wealth among poorer states. This is an unavoidable inequity in any federal system. To make an exception for the Punjab would amount to economic partition of India If Mrs. Gandhi can be faulted, it is for failing to give greater recognition to the Sikh religion, whatever the risks of stirring comparable demands by other minorities. Having fiercely turned on the violent Sikh irreconcilables, she has a chance to address the moderates, led by Harchand Singh Longowal. India's stability and prosperity may well hinge on how well she uses it.

Other Opinion

Time to Talk to the Sikhs

Although rather late in the day, India's prime minister, Mrs. Indira Gandhi, was right in sending troops into the troubled state of Punjab to bring an end to the murderous violence. Several hundred people have been killed and many more injured since the Sihks' agitation for religious concessions and greater political autonomy degenerated into commu-nal strife. Troops have taken control of the entire state. It would be a rash move to withdraw them before an adequate police force can be organized. Sikh extremists have not given up their struggle for a separate, independent homeland. A quick start to bring [moderate Sikhs] to the negotiating table is imperative. - South China Morning Post (Hong Kong).

1909: Miss Morgan Opposes Suffrage NEW YORK - Miss Anne Morgan, daughter of J. Pierpont Morgan, made a speech at the opening of the restaurant for employees at the New York Navy Yard [on June 8]. She gained the applause of 3,000 workmen and wives. Miss Morgan referred to the suffrage question thus: "Many of us women do not need suffrage to make us loyal citizens. Many of us are content to labor quietly for the good of our fellows and to do right. The right to be just has been accorded to us all." She urged employees to make the restaurant such a success that the Government would establish similar restaurants at all navy yards. A committee of the Women's Civic Federation, headed by Miss

François-Poncet also suggested that Russia should join the guarantors of the 1925 Locarno pact. Francois-Poncet hinted that as compensation for the signature of these pacts Germany could return to the arms conference on a basis of equality. Take-Your-Pick Policy on Central America

WASHINGTON — "I can't help people speculating." Secretary of State George Shultz replied the other day when he was asked about suspicions that his surprise trip to Nicaragua was a political ploy. He and President Reagan "thought there was the possibility of an opening; we suggested a meeting; they agreed."

Fair enough —and never mind that the meeting did have the effect of taking the words out of the mouths of those who think the Reagan administration's Central American approach is too heavy on military means and too light on serious negotiation. But there is something the secretary could do about "people speculating." He could sit down with President Reagan and the president's assistant for national security affairs. Robert McFarlane, and try to come up with some coherent, consistent statement of the objectives of U.S. policy.

I do not say that would bowl over congressional opposition or satisfy European concerns. It might not generate support or a more active role by the would-be peacemakers of the region, most notably the so-called Contadora group. Still less would it guarantee positive responses from the Sandinist government.

But if you accept that these are all useful purposes, it does follow that none of them can be bieved as long as the administration remains hung up in some inner conflict between ideals and reality and thus is incapable of saying from one day to the next what it wants.

By his own account, Mr. Shultz was "very clear" with the Sandinist leaders. He laid out "an agenda" calling first for "an end to subversion from one country to another." Second, the Unit-ed States wants Central America to be free of By Philip Geyelin troops and military-type people and the Soviets out of there." Third, Mr. Shultz would somehow cut the Nicaraguan armed forces "down to size." His fourth demand is for nothing less than a funda-mental reform of the Nicaraguan political and social system: "We want to see progress toward phiralism and democracy," he said.

But if the Sandinists are as awful as the Reagan administration says they are, they would have to be removed before pluralism could flourish. So if that is really U.S. policy, there is not much more to talk about. If it is a bargaining chip, the contradictions in past pronouncements make it a chip hardly worth playing.

True, Mr. Reagan was saying back in March that the United States would only stop its "covert" aid to the Nicaraguan rebels when the Sandinists "keep their promise and restore dem-ocratic rule." But when this upset congressional critics, the president wrote a letter to the Senate majority leader, Howard Baker of Tennessee, ssuring him that the United States was not trying to "destabilize or overthrow the government of Nicaragua," but only trying to get it to "cease to involve itself in the internal or external affairs of its neighbors."

In April, President Reagan was careful once again to say that "our interest in Nicaragua is one, and only one": to stop the Sandinists from exporting revolution. He said the United States would try to "inconvenience that government until they quit that kind of action."

But in his major Central American policy speech in May he was talking once again of U.S.

Nicaragnan people." And two days later he was moted at telling a group of conservative leaders that "the cancer of communism" must be "excised from Central America. But the very next day Mr. McFarlane, the support for the "democratic aspirations of the National Scenity Gonnell adviser, was asked whether the administration was trying to over-throw the Nicaragian government. "No, it isn't." he said. "The policy of the United States is to try. together with the Contadora countries ... to come to terms with Nicaragna in a relationship in which we and they mind our own business." Got it? Two sentences later he added: "All we ask is that they stop exporting revolution and violence to their neighborn."

If a fuse blew at that point and you missed the rest of the sentence ("... and give the people who are looking for democracy in Nicaragua a chance") you would have saved yourself the confusion compounded by a subsequent exchange. Asked whether U.S. support of the "contras" was not pushing the Sandmists beyond the point of compromise, Mr. McFarlane spoke of the "simplicity of our terms." He added: "The United States has no territorial ambition. We have no particular interest in the outcome of the complexion of that government -- as long as it provides for physicism."

So the United States wants to (a) remove (b) reform (c) restraint (d) "moonwement" the Sandinist government — or (c) all of the above. Is it any wonder that some members of Congress take so dim a view of a program of ostensibly covert United States intervention in Nicaragna when its only remaining covert aspect is the purpose it

The Settlers' Presence Is No Longer a Transitory One

AMBRIDGE Massachu During the 17 years since the 1967 war, Israel has ruled unchallenged over the West Bank, Gaza Strip and Golan Heights. While the international community has raged against this policy, successive governments and large numbers of Israelis have undertaken the single-minded pursuit of what the former President Chaim Weizmann once called "building Palestine." This policy of creating facts has created a new reality. What was once described as military occupation has become de facto and in Jerusalem and the Golan Heights, even legal annexation. Israel is effectively sovereign over all of the territory between the Jordan River and the Mediterranean Sea. He reluctantly concedes that the ground has been prepared for permanent Israeli occupa-tion, and that the new population of Israeli settlers favoring annexation has made withdrawal politically untenable. In Mr. Benvenisti's view, the clock has already struck midnight.

But even more important and more troubling than these arguments from physical conditions is the psychological dimension — the transformation of Israel's public consciousness since 1967. Opponents of annexation rightly argue that the facts on the ground are reversible: Jewish settlements can be dismantled and their populations repatriated. The answer is that political facts can change with circumstances. The

This year, it was the same. The first votes Mr. Mondale not for the nomination came from his colleagues in nation came from his colleagues in the congressional cancases last winter, and the last came from other politicians on Capitol Hill and the state capitols, responding to his phone calls for help last week. Without the support of 307 of the 568 "super-delegates," he would still be scrambling to nail down the prize. The paradox is that Mr. Mondale is intensely competitive and aggressive in his dealings with other politicians — as Gary Hart found out to his shock. He is tough in the clinches. his shock. He is tough in the clinches.

That comes as no surprise to politi-cians of both parties in his home state, who saw him maneuver his way past other aspuring young men, or to Republicans on Capitol Hill, who know him as an intense partisan. But the toughness of Mr. Mondale's attacks on Mr. Hart showed a side of his character the public had not seen. Politicians accept and respect those paradoxical qualities, because most of them possess them to some degree. In the inside world of politics. there is honor and success awaiting the person who builds alliances but thes hard for his own causes. Mr. Mondale is the purest product of the world to emerge as a presidential nominee since the public began dominating the selection process through the primaries. He is more truly a "politicians" politician "than the introspective Richard M. Nixon, and far more of one than the incumbent or his predecessor.

That is both his strength and his weakness in the coming campaign. The mass of voters who will decide between Mr. Mondale and Mr. Reagan tend to look for other qualities in quence, an appealing personality and, most important, a large-minded vision of the nation's future. They are qualities the public sees in Mr. Reagan. For Mr. Mondale to have a chance against the incumbent, he must begin quickly to demonstrate Israel has for all practical purposes that he possesses them, too. Otherwise, his own strategy for the generalannexed the territories? Israel's efelection campaign will almost cer-tainly rebound against him. There is no secret about that strategy. Mr. Mondale hopes to win by mobilizing the base of the Democratic Party - the farmer-labor constituencies he grew up with at home, the blacks and Hispanics, the elderly and the economically insecure, the peace groups and other progressive forces To mobilize their support, he plans an aggressive, close-quarters attack on Mr. Reagan's leadership and on Republican policies. It is an attack he will inunch with far more pleasure, and far less compunction, than he showed in cutting down Gary Hart.

But unless Mr. Mondale establishes the "presidential" qualities Mr. Reagan is already seen to passess, that strategy is almost corrain to fail Republican policies. It is an attack he that strategy is almost certain to fail If he is seen simply as "the politician" kicking the shins of "the president," then he will quickly be in trouble. Without building a sense of personal trust and projecting an inclusive vision of the national future, he may be son of the national future, he may be seen as divisive.

That threat is underscored by the picture the public received of the Democratic Party in the primary campaign. It is of a party facing in four directions. Most of its traditional constituencies supported Mr. Mondale. Blacks followed Jesse Jackana. The appearant may reflect the son. The younger, more affinent voters looked to Mr. Hart. The Southern moderates and conservatives stayed on the sidelines, having lost then spokesmen and candidates early.

The weeks up through the mid-July Democratic convention will test whether Mr. Mondale can unite his party. If he can, he has a chance to define his personality and his program for a national audience in his acceptance speech. If he can do that. then he can draw the issue with Mr. Reagan and the Republicans.

U.S. Under Strong Pressure Fires Aides At London Summit Meeting Over Losses

By LEONARD SILK

New York Times Service ONDON - The Reagan administration had hoped to make this 10th annual economic summit conference an election-year celebration of the president's conduct of economic policy. Instead, the administration is coming under fire from its summit colleagues for aggravating the debt problems of the Third World, overstimulating the U.S. economy and forcing interest rates so high as to endanger world economic

Representatives of other countries, interviewed in London, focus on the huge U.S. budget deficits as the basic cause of all these troubles. They say the deficits, in combination with Washington's restrictive monetary policies simed at holding inflation in check, have produced interest rates that are so high that they wipe out the gains achieved by developing countries from higher exports and lower im-At the same time, critics of the United States say, the high interest rates have made the dollar overly strong, which has driven the U.S. trade deficit to its biggest proportions in history. The trade deficit, expected to reach an incredible $120 billion this year, appears to be running now at an annual rate of nearly $150 billion. By wiping out jobs and forcing plant closings in export industries and in those that compete with imports, the trade deficit is strengthening protectionist pressure from both industry and labor. Such pressure is growing all over the industrial world, intensifying the danger to the developing countries.

The Canadians at the London conference are stressing the world's "structural" problems. This is a term that covers a multitude of ailments: excess capacity in basic industries, stub-born unemployment, inadequate earnings to support investment in modern equipment, barriers to trade that hamper efficiency of production and domestic restrictions that hamper growth.

But while many of the economic conferees are deeply concerned about such structural problems - and want the communique that ultimately emerges to take account of them - nobody wants to get specific on how to deal with them.

Similarly, though many of the delegates are anxious about the threat that climbing interest rates pose to the debtor nations, nobody is willing to advance a plan for tackling the widening problem. But there is reason to expect that, however bland and vague the communique wording on the debt question may be, the mounting anxiety so evident in London will generate action in the weeks and months ahead.

Most of the officials at this meeting apparently would prefer to tackle the debt problem case by case, rewarding virtuous countries, such as Mexico or Brazil, that have adopted economic austerity programs with more generous loan terms.

Several Latin American countries, led by President João Baptista Figueredo of Brazil, persuaded Prime Minister Yasubiro ... Nakasone of Japan to raise the debt problem with President Thursday morning with Mr. Reagan.

It is not just the Latin Americans, with the help of the Japanese, who are pressing the United States to do more to bring interest rates down. The day before the London conference began, Chancellor Helmut Kohl of West Germany told his parliament that he felt that high U.S. interest rates and large budget deficits were hurting the West German economy. Other leaders have made similar statements concerning their countries.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan said at a news conference we know that our interest rates are high." And he reiterated the U.S. position that budget deficits had no proved relationship to nterest rates. Nevertheless, he said, the United States deplores budget deficits and is making a down payment to reduce the iencis for h

Even so, be added, high interest rates are a consequence of many things besides budget deficits, such as "fiscal policy, nonetary policy, condition of the country, growth in the economy, opportunity for investment."

This is so. The opportunity for investment seems to be roaring head full steam in the United States. The private sector is porrowing up a storm, adding its force to government borrowing. So interest rates are climbing, scaring the industrial countries and the developing countries of the Third World.

Obviously something will have to be done about this. After the U.S. presidential election. If the world can wait that long.

Marsh's Deficit Hit $165 Million

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatchet NEW YORK — Marsh & McLeman Cos., the largest insurance broker in the United States, said on Friday that it has fired its treasurer and several other execu tives because of losses totaling $165 million from the trading of government bonds.

"Our investigation did reach the point which made it appropriate to take certain actions regarding persomel, thus the treasurer and the key employees in the investment management group have had their employment terminated," Marsh & Mcleman's chairman, John M. Re-gan Jr., told shareholders at the nual meeting.

The fired executives include treasurer Chester A. Gan, bond trader Dorothy Conway, and Richard D. Post Jr., who was vice president and head of the investment group. In the unusual case that shocked Wall Street, Marsh & McLennan bought on credit long-term government bonds valued at $2 billion, and other securities. As interest rates rose, bond prices fell and the positions had to be liquidated at a

Companies Try Many Designs For Japanese

By Andrew Pollack New York Times Service

TOKYO — While increasing numbers of American office workers are adapting to the computer keyboard after years spent at the familiar typewriter, their Japanese counterparts face a more fundamental question: How do you use a keyboard?

The answer is: not easily. Some versions, with hundreds of keys and thousands of charac-ters, are enough to give a typist Indeed, as the Japanese strug-

Only recently have Japanese computer companies managed to develop practical word processors for their own language. Now, they say, the door is open for office automa-

According to the Ministry of International Trade and Industry, sales of word processors are expected to jump to 170,000 units this year from 96,000 in 1983. In 1982, the first year of any significant word-processor sales here, about 35,000 were

"To get to this point has been a 20-year struggle," said Toshi-michi Hirai, senior manager of automated office systems product planning for the Toshiba Corp. "From now on, Japanese office automation probably will advance at least at the same speed as in the United States." The most obvious of the many obstacles facing office equip ment makers in Japan is how to squeeze 2,000 or more language characters onto a keyboard. Indeed, because of the difficulty and expense, typewriters never became commonplace in Japan. Most business correspondence has either been handwritten or sent to a professional printer. Leutwiler to Quit As Chief of BIS And Swiss Bank

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches BERN - Fritz Leutwiler, who helped to put together emergency central bank loans for several countries during the debt crisis, will resign at the end of this year as president of the Bank for International Settlements and the Swiss National Bank, the government said Friday.

Mr. Leutwiler, who will be 60 next month, said in a letter of resignation to Finance Minister Otto Stich that he had intended to step down as the national bank chief several years before reaching the retirement age of 65. He has held that post since 1974.

The government said Mr. Leutwiler will step down from both the Swiss National Bank and BIS posts at the end of this year.

While president of the national bank, Mr. Lentwiler presided over monetary policies that have helped Switzerland maintain a reputation for having one of the world's best-At the BIS, he helped institute a short-term bridging-loan policy that helped avert the financial collapse of some of the world's most heavily indebted countries. A national bank spokesman de-

There was also no official word on reports that Mr. Leutwiler would become head of BBC Brown Boveri & Co., the Swiss engineering group, upon leaving the bank. Mr. Leutwiler's departure will not affect the continuity of Swiss National Bank monetary policy, a bank spokesman said. He said that while Mr. Leutwiler was the most visible of the three-member directorate, policy was decided by con-

The other two members are Mr. Languetin and Markus Lusser, both of whom have been influential in forging policy, he said. Mr. Leutwiler, who has been a national banker since 1952, took

At that time, the Basel-based BIS, considered the bank for central bankers, played a key role in providing short-term funds to trou-bled debtors, notably Brazil, Mexiippines' long-delayed request for a to reschedule part of its $25.6-bil- problem and that we deserve their $650-million standby credit loan.

Marcos Clears Price Rises for Basic Commodities

By David E. Sanger New York Times Service

NEW YORK - In a move to step up pressure on competitors in the home and personal computer markets, International Business Machines Corp. has announced deep price cuts on its entire Personal Computer line, including its troubled PCir home computer.

The reductions, which have long been expected in the industry, were from 18 percent to about 23 per-

The computer giant, whose three-year-old Personal Computer has become an industry standard, also quadrupled the amount of internal memory it offers with its entry-level models. This makes even the most basic machines capable of rinning some of the most popular and increasingly complex software packages.

But it did not announce any changes in the design of the PCjr, which has floundered since its introduction in January. Analysts say the PCir is falling between two markets because at $800 to $1,600 it costs too much for the casual user but is not powerful enough for the more serious computer operator. There has also been criticism of the keyboard and the size of the memory.

But Apple may suffer less from the cuts than the many IBM-comparible manufacturers, who have stayed alive by offering machines that are only marginally different from IBM models but cost about 20 percent less.

But the president of one manu facturer affected by the cut, Rod Canion of Compaq Computer Corp., contended in a telephone interview from Houston that his company might even benefit from the IBM action. "We anticipated the move and cut our prices accordingly," said Mr. Canion, referring to a price cut announced by Compaq several weeks ago. He said, however, that after the President Reagan's economic policies won general support despite concern by many over high U.S. interest rates. Commonwealth Edison was the most active NYSE-listed issue, off % to 231/2 with a block of 727,000 shares trading at 23 %.

Syntex, subject of leveraged buyout rumors, was second on the list, up 2% to 43%. Syntex officials said they could not explain the activity in their stock. IBM was the third most active issue, unchanged at 105%. IBM cut the prices of its personal computers and PCjr home computers by up to 23 percent.

Walt Disney was fourth, unchanged at 65% before trading was halted. The financier Saul Steinberg said he would offer $67.50 for 49 percent of Disney and would increase the bid to $72.50 for all stock if the company dropped its equisition of Gibson Greetings.
Teledyne soared 10% to 212% in active trading. Analysts attributed the surge to a short squeeze in which traders who sold borrowed shares early in the day hopes the stock would fall had to replace those shares at higher prices when it began to rise.

Alleghany Corp., up 2½ the previous two sessions, climbed 3½ to 85½. Published reports said analysts think Alleghany has the inside track on buying Conrail from the government. Transco Energy, which soared 4¼ Thursday, added ½ to 43¼. Transco said it was not inside the contract of the volved in merger talks as had been rumored. Large Investors Encourage Boom In Takeovers By Mark Potts gun Post Setsice WASHINGTON - Large institutional investors may be encouraging the boom in corporate acquisitions, the chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission said says.

John S.R. Shad, chairman of the SEC, said.

Thursday that while corporate managers are taking steps to protect their companies from takeovers, institutions may start trying to force such mergers to increase the values of their stock holdings.

"A rising number of institutions will not only oppose future anti-takeover proposals by managements but also begin to support corporate breakups and mergers with a view toward crihancing the value of their investments," Mr. Shad said in a speech to members of the financial community is New York.

He added, however, that he does not believe the institutional role in the merger trend has been negative, and he said Congress should no take steps to slow the merger boom.

"The evolutionary response of the market-lace to changing business conditions has been place to changing business conditions has been more effective than less flexible laws and regulations," he said.

The boom in corporate takeovers in recent months has led several major companies to ask shareholders this spring to approve charter thanges aimed at the string takeover attempts. While many of the changes have been approved, several have been defeated, and much of the opposition apparently has come from institutional investors who fear the anti-takeover provisions will limit the price of a company's stock by making a buyout all but impossible.

At least one large instinutional investor, Bat-terymarch Fmancial Management, a Bostonbased cominy found with $11 billion in assets, high adopted a stated policy of opposing corporate anti-takeover provisions. Other institutional in-vestors, including insurance companies, banks and pension funds, also have opposed anti-takeover moves by companies in which they

"Until last year, institutional investors' opposition to management proposals has been negligible." Mr. Shad said. "However, last year they and other investors defeated anti-takeover proposals by a ausaber of companies, includin Castle & Cook, Data General, Internation Paper and Sherwin-Williams, to name a few."

Dean LeBaron, president of Batterymarch, said the company always has opposed anti-takeover measures "as being harmful to the liquidity of our investment holdings."

We want as open a market as possible, not constricted market," he said.

Olympia Seeks Stake In Developer

TORONTO — Olympia & York Developments Ltd. said Friday that it is seeking to acquire a 19.9percent interest in Cadillac Fairview Corp., but has no immediate plans for a takeover bid.

The company said it already has purchased about 12.9 million common shares and 1.2 million war-rants of Cadillac Fairview as "portfolio investments."

The company said it agreed, subject to certain conditions, to buy a further 3.4 million shares to bring its total to 16.3 million, or 19.9 percent of the stock outstanding.

It said it may acquire further Cadillac shares beyond the 19.9 percent as "additional portiolio investments subject to market conditions and other factors."

Temporary Extension Likely On World Cocoa Agreement

By Brij Khindaria

GENEVA - The current International Cocoa Agreement will be temporarily extended when it expires Sept. 30 to allow more time for talks on a new accord, senior plomatic sources here say. The extension was made necessary by the failure of a 73-nation conference in Geneva last month to make enough progress toward the new agreement, which would be the fourth in a series begun in 1972. The decision to extend the old accord is expected to be made at a meeting of the cocoa trading countries in London from July 16 to 20. A new session of the cocoa talks is to be held in Geneva from Oct. 26 to 28 under the auspices of the United Nations Conference on

The sources said that last month's talks revealed more determination to stabilize prices although there was no significant narrowing of differences between exporting and importing countries.

Trade and Development.

The president of the cocoa conference, Mario Aleman of Ecuador, said producers and consumers have agreed that the new accord should rely mainly on a buffer stock mechanism that maintains prices within Zimmer AG, a unit of Davy a certain range by buying cocoa for McKee AG, has won contracts storage when prices fall and selling when they rise.

But major differences remained over how the buffer stock operations might be strengthened through such other measures as controls on supplies and exports,

The sources said the main dispute is between the Ivory Coast, the world's largest cocoa producer, and the European Community, the largest importer under the current accord. The Ivory Coast is not a signatory to the current agreement. The United States, the world's largest importer, also is not a signa-tory, although it is participating in the negotiations.

The current agreement relies solely on a buffer-stock mechanism to stabilize prices. Under it more than $225 million was spent defending a floor price of 110 cents a

But the surpluses that had char acterized markets for five straight years dried up with the 1981-82 crop year. A shortage developed after 1982 mainly because of poor weather and quality-control problems in such major producer countries as Brazil, Nigeria, Ecuador and Ghana. Prices rose to a high of 120.09 cents a pound last month but held well below the 160 cents ceiling set in the current accord.

ANYONE with a benign outlook on the course of AU. S. history would seem to have reason to be nervous about the publication of Gore Vidal's new novel, "Lincoln," the fourth and latest book in his fictional tetralogy, of which "Burn," "1876" and "Washington, D.C." were the previous entries.

After all, Vidal, a most accomplished and commanding historical novelist, has not been especially kind to American history in general or to such icons as Thomas Jefferson, John Marshall, or Ulysses S.

Grant in particular. Moreover, in an essay on Lincoln that he included in his most recent collection of nonfiction writing, "The Second American Revolution." Vidal managed to work in everything unsavory that is known about the Great Emancipator, including the extremely flimsy gossip, supposedly floated by his former law partner, William Herndon, but generally discounted by serious scholars, all, one turns the opening pages of Vidal's "Lin-stunned into narrative paralysis by the figure of Lincoln. For where the earlier books in the tetral-ogy, particularly "Burr" and "1876," were narrated with high style and a swagger, "Lincoln" is sodden in its lack of pace or focus. The viewpoint switches arbitrarily and unpredictably among a half-dozen characters, and the details pile up so haphazardly and hectically that it's often difficult to keep one's mind on the story.

that he can write historical caricature? In his Afterword, he writes that how much of "Lincoln" is made up "is an urgent question for any reader, and deserves as straight an answer as the writer can give." He then states that "all of the principal characters really existed, and they said and did pretty much what I have them saying and doing."
He ends by thanking a Lincoln scholar for "his patient reading — and correction — of the manuscript."

in his lengthy chronicle, which confines itself to the years of Lincoln's presidency. To be sure, there are the blemishes present. The log cabin, rail-splitting legend is debunked. Billy Herndon shows up, gets drunk and talks about Lincoln's whoring adventures as well as the likelihood of his having picked up an infection somewhere along the way. And considerable attention is focused on Mary Todd Lincoln's emotional and financial difficulties, if shortcomings. But far overshadowing his faults are Lincoln's dignity, his self-deprecatory wit, his endless patience and restraint and his inexhaustible supply of folksy, slightly long-winded stories. The major per-sonal drama of "Lincoln" — as opposed to the historical one - is the gradual revelation of Lincoin's deep vision and iron determination, as seen from the point of view of men who judge him at first to be weak and manipulable. But he's also a shrew politician and an adroit handler of men. If the

What can Vidal possibly be up to in "Lincoln"? Did he set out to write an antihistory of Lincoln and then change his mind in midstream? The first appearance of Lincoln, sneaking into Washington like a burglar to avoid assassination, suggests that possi-bility, but it is too flimsy a piece of evidence. Or is Vidal striving for the ultimate in historical authenticity now that he has proved in his earlier novels

Perhaps Vidal only wishes to edify in "Lincoln." Certainly he has deromanticized the era. There are no illusions of a war fought to free the slaves, or of Lincoln's faith in a viable future for the Negro in American society, or of an end to political back-

Asked if the Blazers gave up too much to sign the former UCLA star, Portland general manager Stu Inman said: "If we thought it was too much, we would not have consummated the trade."

The Blazers are expected to pick center Sam Bowie of Kentucky as the No. 2 choice in the June 19 draft. The Blazers also pledged to resign Paxson, who is a free agent who is considered to be greatly underpaid by NBA standards.

Inman said the NBA salary cap was not a consideration in making the trade, despite the high salaries that will be demanded by Bowie and Paxson and the lucrative contract signed last year by Natt.

'Let's Not Have Lunch'

WASHINGTON — The trouble with foreign people in this a holler when I wanted to have country is that they take everything Americans say literally. I have a French friend named Michel Bernheim. I met him the other day on the street, and after the usual chit-some time,' he doesn't necessarily chat about Paris I said, "Give me a call some time."

The next day he was on the line. "Bonjour," he said, "It's Michel. You said to give you a call."

"Oui, don't you remember? I spoke to you yesterday on Pennsylvania Avenue.

didn't mean for you to give me a call right away. I was iust finding a nice way to say Buchwald

Then you don't want to talk on "I can't think of anything to say.

"But you asked me to call you." "You're right, Michel. Look, I'm terribly busy right now. Let's have lunch some time. "I would like that. When?"

"I'm not sure. Why don't you give me a holler?" Two days later I heard someon calling my name from the sidewalk. I opened the window in my office and Michel was down below. "What in the devil are you shouting about?" I yelled down to him. You said to give you a holler when I wanted to have lunch. How about today? "I'm busy today." "Well, when can you have

"I'm not sure. I'm tied up for the next three weeks."

Phillips Collection Reopens

New York Times Service WASHINGTON — The Phillips Collection, the oldest American museum of modern art, has reopened after being closed for a year for renovation of the 1897 family mansion in which it is housed. The opening show, from Paris, is of 61 works of Pierre Bonnard, many never before shown in the United States, It closes Aug. 25, then goes to the Dallas Museum of Art.

lunch if you were so tied up" "Michel, you've been around long enough to know when an mean it. It's a pleasantry. You French say, 'Au revoir,' the Germans say, 'Auf wiedersehen,' the Spanish say, 'Hasta mañana,' and Americans say, 'Let's have lunch,' which in our country means. 'Don't call me, I'll call you."

Michel said, "I didn't mean to hother you." "You didn't bother me. I'll tell you what. Let's check in with each other and have a drink one of these That would be great," Michel

I was sweating out a column the next day when the door opened and Michel stuck his head in. Now what?

"I'm just checking in to see if you wanted a drink."

"Can't you see I'm busy?" "I can see that now, but couldn't before I checked in with

"Michel, you're driving me nuts. You can't take everything we Americans say as gospel. The only reason I said 'Let's have a drink some time' is because I wanted you to stop hollering under my window about having lunch together."

"All you have to do is tell me you don't want to see me," Michel said in a hurt voice, "instead of asking me to meet with you all the time and then breaking the date."
I felt badly. "You're right. I feel terrible about the way I've treated you. Our problem is that we're so used to saying goodbye to each other with a promise we'll get together soon, that no one in this country expects the other person to keep it. We wouldn't be able to get anything done if we had lunch with everyone we accidentally met on

"I understand," Michel said. "But if you change your mind, you have my card and you can call me." "I don't have your card, Michel. That's another thing you don't understand. When Americans exchange business cards with each other, they usually throw them away when they get home."

Sergio Leone: Once Upon a Film in America

New York Times Service OS ANGELES - What really

L happened to "Once Upon a Time in America"? Sergio Leone's epic look at a group of New York gangsters, starring Robert De Niro and

James Woods, is currently playing in the United States and abroad in two drastically different versions, one an hour and 15 minutes shorter than the original. The cut version, opened by Warner Bros. and the Ladd Co. last weekend in 894 theaters in North America, is a significant departure from the 3-hour, 40minute film Leone presented at the Cannes film festival last month, and which is now playing in Europe.

(Barry Reardon, president of Warner Bros. Distribution, has confirmed that the long version will be released in the United States in early fall in a few theaters in each major city.) Ladd Co. executives said that they reluctantly cut the film, without Leone's participation, be-cause of negative audience reaction at two previews of the original. They also expressed a conviction that American movie audiences won't attend a film that runs for three hours or more. (The Ladd Co. got evidence supporting that theory in the poor performance of "The Right Stuff," which could never overcome its 3-hour, 12-minute

"Gandhi" and "Reds," which also exceeded three hours, have not been box-office hits.) The longer version, however, is a hit in France and Italy; the heavily edited edition opened in the United States to "disappointing" results, according to Warners. The film took in only $2.35 million at box offices in its opening weekend.

The implications of the drastic pruning of the film go beyond the commercial realm and the Ladd Co.'s attempt to recover its $10 million investment in the $28-million production.

The total restructuring of the story, from an impressionistic-memory film using flashbacks and flash-forwards to a linear chronological story, has raised questions about the primacy of a movie director's "vision."

Sergio Leone

Leone, in an interview at Cannes, emphasized that he had no control over the content of the U.S. version, edited by Zack Staenberg, Staenberg said that he declined to take an editing credit. Leone said that he lost his privilege of final cut once the running time of the film exceeded 2 hours. 45 minutes. It was a painful moment for the director, who had spent 10 years trying to get "Once Upon a Time" off the ground. It took him two more years to make the movie, which was filmed in New York, Rome, Montreal and Florida. This [truncated version] is literally killing my picture," the Italian director said, speaking through an interpreter. "It's not a chronological film, and it's not just a gangster story. It's a story of friendship, time, memory, hate and love Even if Leone had delivered a film at the agreed length, Alan Ladd Jr., the president of Ladd, said that he doubted that it could have been successfully released here. Plans to release the original in two parts also were abandoned.

"If Sergio had come here and seen the previews we held for the film in Boston and New York. I don't know whether he wouldn't have wanted to go with our ver-sion," Ladd said. "We always told Sergio his [version] was too long.

"Unfortunately, whether you want to say that American audiences are lazy or that they have a TV mentality, this picture just didn't play here." Ladd said. "People thought it was confusing, boring, violent and sexist. We tried all kinds of things to keep Sergio's material, but we just couldn't pull it off."

The key previews, in Boston in February and in New York in April, proved fatal to Leone's conception of the film as an opium-induced dream of the gangster Noodles, played by De Niro. According to several persons present at the previews, audiences walked out during the movie's two explicit rape scenes and after several violent sequences, such as one in which a gun is fired pointblank into a rival gangster's eye. There also was unintended laughter in a pivotal scene in the second half of "Once Upon a

Time," in which De Niro, looking remarkably aged, confronts his paramour of 35 years earlier, played by a still-youthful-looking Elizabeth McGovern. In the current U.S. version, McGovern's character disappears halfway through the film. Several other important scenes, such as the establishment of the friendship between the characters played by De Niro and Woods, were eliminated, and both rape sequences and many of the violent confrontations were shortened and toned down. "I don't think we changed the rhythm of the movie at all," Ladd said. "No one in the world wanted Sergio's version to succeed more than we did. There are some terrific scenes on the cutting-room

While Leone chose not to discuss any changes with the Ladd executives, producer Arnon Milchan participated in the re-editing and declared himself satisfied that the Ladd team had done its best in a difficult situation. "It's almost another movie," he acknowledged in a telephone interview from Montreal. "It's a very decent movie, but the long version is a wonderful movie." The most drastic change in "Once Upon a Time" comes at the film's conclusion, which now ends with an audible gunshot, not heard in any of the various endings that Leone filmed - the European version closes with an ambiguous freeze-frame of a drugged-out De Niro. Ladd said the gunshot ending was the sole element of the shortened film not created by Leone.

Aging De Niro in "Once Upon a Time in America"

We talked about the ending with Sergio, who said that he didn't understand American audiences and told us to do what we wanted with it," Ladd explained. "It seemed to us that the best way to go was to give the film an ending, a period. Nothing else seemed to work."

Leone declined to attend the premiere of the shortened version: at the World Film Festival in Montreal last week, "Only when my version comes out will I come to America," he said.

■ 'Hallucinatory Epic'

Vincent Canby of The New York Times, reviewing the shortened ver sion of the film, wrote in part:

Sergio Leone, the Italian director who gave class to the term "spaghetti western," has made some weird movies in his day but nothing to match "Once Upon a Time in America," a lazily hallucinatory epic that means to encapsulate approximately 50 years of American social history into a single film.

Although it's set almost entirely in New York, and although it's about a group of tough, Brooklyn Jewish boys who speak American argot as they grow up to become legendary mob lightes, the movie looks and sounds more authentically Italian than your average San Gennaro festival.

We've come to expect this sort of thing from Leone, whose best westerns, including "The Good, the Ball and the Ugly" and "A Fistful of Dollars," are very personal, very lialian meditations on American movies that impressed him as a child. What is not expected is that his name should be attached to a film that makes so little narrative serise....

Having been cut . . . it plays like a long inscrutable trailer for what might have been an enteraining movie. It is, I suppose, theoretically possible to remove that much footage from such a lengthy film and still have something coherent at the end, but this with a roulette wheel.

Like most films that have been so clumsily abbreviated, this shorter version . . . seems endless, possibly because whatever internal structure it might have had no longer exists. It's a collection of occasionally vivid but mostly unfathomable incidents in which people are introduced and then disappear with the unex-plained suddenness of victims of mob murders.

Beach Boys Are Back For Washington's 4th

The Beack Boys, banned by former Interior Secretary James Watt from Washington's July Fourth celebration last year, are planning to headline the Independence Day show next month next the Washington Mountment, Watt's succes-sor said, "We have the Beach Boys and five or an other arises, primarhydrountry singers, who will be on the Mail. Interior Secretary Wil-Ham Clark said. The group attracted hundreds of thousands of fans to their July Fourth shows on the Washington Mali in 1980 and 1981. Watt complaining that the holiday celebration was being marred by "rock bands attracting the wrong element," banned the Beach Boys last year in favor of Wayne New ton, a Las Vegas casino performer. Watt lifted the ban after Nancy Reagan, White House chief of staff Michael Deaver and Vice President George Bush came to the Beach Boys' defense. By that time, the Beach Boys were committed to another performance.

King Juan Carlos of Spain, who attended Harvard University but never graduated, was awarded an honocary doctor of laws degree by the school at its 333d commencement. Juan Carlos, 46, whose ascent to the throne in 1976 marked the return of democracy to Spain. gave the commencement address Thursday to 25,000 graduates, alumni and family members. Among others receiving honorary degrees were the musician Benny Goodman; Teddy Kollek, mayor of Jerusalem: the Pulitzer Prize-winnine historian Barbara Tuchman; the Nobel Prize-winning economist Sir William Arthur Lewis, and the Nobel Prize-winning physiologist Sir Andrew Fielding Huxley.

Fifteen of the world's most re-nowned che's raised $200,000 for the March of Dimes by cooking an elaborate 11-course dinner to honor Graig Claiborne, food editor of The New York Times. The fund-raiser was organized by Pierre Francy, French chef and anthor of the Times's syndicated column "The 60-Minute Gourmet," who ran from table to table urging the 410 guests, who paid $500 apiece, to "eat your food!" Highest praise went to a spicy shrimp creole, cooked by Paul Prudhomme of K-Paul's restaurant in Louisiana.
